

Job opportunities at Fathom

Our team is always on the lookout for strong candidates with top-flight academic training and an excellent understanding of the relationship between the macro economy, financial markets and politics.

In addition, we are urgently looking to fill the two specific vacancies set out below. Subject to necessary documentation, the successful candidate for each post could be based in our London or in our New York office. We would look equally favourably on applications from candidates based in either location.

Experienced economist

We are looking to appoint an outstanding individual with at least three years of experience working as a professional economist. The ideal candidate would be a good, all-round economist, able to think globally while adapting their skills to the analysis of any country or region as required. Proven quantitative skills would also be an advantage. If you would like to apply for this role, please submit your curriculum vitae and a cover letter using the career enquiries form on our website.

Economic data analyst

We are urgently seeking an economic data analyst with a good working knowledge of R and other visualisation and ETL software, including Tableau Desktop and Tableau Prep Builder. The role would suit someone who has experience managing large datasets, who has designed and developed interactive dashboards and who also has a flair for finding creative ways to visualise complex data. A quantitative mindset, and a keen interest in economics and finance are required, together with a good degree in a relevant subject and a few years of relevant work experience. If you would like to apply for this role, please submit your curriculum vitae and a cover letter using the career enquiries form on our website.
